課程概述 Course Descriptions	This is a survey course covering the English literary tradition from the sixteenth century to the seventeenth century. Given the scope and nature of the course, students must gear up the considerable amount of reading assignments, with the instructor's guidance. Group report and group discussion of these works will be assigned in the class. Before the mid-term, the reading will cover representative works of Christopher Marlowe and William Shakespeare's sonnets. After the mid-term, we will move to read William Shakespeare's King Lear and John Donne's sonnets. Though time allows only cursory and selective readings of texts under consideration, we will still try to conduct guided readings and in-depth analyses of the representative texts.
學習目標 Learning Objectives	(1) introduce the cultural and historical background; (2) locate the major critical issues in the work under discussion; (3) approach the work from new perspectives
