COURSE DESCRIPTION

One goal of the seminar is to help graduate students to learn basic formal syntax and the interfaces between syntax and semantics systematically. Reading materials will be assigned in the class (no textbook).

The other goal is to provide a research forum on formal syntax. Both students and the instructor will read and discuss literatures that are related to their research topics, and report their own research in class.

All participants will be given an opportunity to train their argumentation skills through evaluating the reading materials and debating with others, and to discuss their own research problems in order to get help from others.
